POLY PAGES
AN ACADEMIC NON-MONOGAMOUS PLATFORM

VALUE STATEMENTS

honesty / authenticity

Poly Pages only operates in ways that feel authentic and honest to the collaborators involved. We operate from a place of ruthless honesty, even when it is difficult.

collaboration over competition

Poly Pages prioritizes collaboration with others for mutual benefit, over competition. This is based in radical abundance thinking - finding that there is enough for everyone - and active deconstruction of capitalist exploitation.

de-platforming and normalising

Poly Pages is a collective that resists the platforming of individuals. We believe that normalizing non-monogamy can only happen through the removal of community figureheads, which by definition must exist in competition with others and without self-honesty. Polyamory is not a brand. Platforming is dangerous

evidence and knowledge

Poly Pages works to push the boundaries of what is known about polyamory - by consulting with academics, knowledge translation, and championing cutting-edge research. We resist the assimilation of knowledge into a single-source and do not believe in a single way to 'do polyamory'.

community-led

Poly Pages is grassroots, in that our work is based on the community interest and community need. We encourage and welcome new projects, new collaborations and new conversations from the community.

critical thinking

Poly Pages values critical discussion as a core skill and methodology in our work and operations. We lean towards facilitating conversations and events which are critical and inquisitive about polyamory and non-monogamy. We ask our members and our participants to join us in questioning and exploring as equals, as opposed to a student/teacher dynamic

VISION STATEMENT

Deconstructing mono-normativity through critical, informed and empowered conversations

MISSION STATEMENT

to enhance the conversation
about polyamory and nonmonogamy, our community and culture
